Address

rue d'Angleterre 53-55 / rue de Hollande 58-60, 1060 Bruxelles

Programme

The project is located on a crossing plot from Rue d'Angleterre to Rue de Hollande. The complex is divided into three successive parts which differ by their architectural style. A neoclassical building is composed of 9 apartments on Rue d'Angleterre, while an industrial concrete construction is composed of 6 apartments on Rue de Hollande. These two complexes are connected by a collective garden in the center of the block, on which there are a collective room and an atelier.

About

The project was mainly developed following 3 objectives: open up the building complex, exploit the constructive potential which is born from the different sizes of the neighboring buildings, preserve the architectural heritage and integrate it into a new harmonious project.

These objectives led us to demolish many constructions to create a large collective garden in the center of the block. A common room is set up next to the garden to enhance the desire to create social link. The garden is shaped like a promenade thanks to many paths and little gardens. These ones offer many different perspectives on the complex and highlight the crossing plot. Although each apartment has a private outdoor space, the project tries to promote the use of common spaces and doesn't generate any shyness in using them. The three parts of the complex are raised in a clear architectural language that identifies the contemporary intervention while unifying the whole. This identification is possible thanks to materials of the new roofs and facades.
