NIJMEGEN: DESIGNING THE ‘CITY BRIDGE’ BY LAURENT NEY

The book is a personal account by Laurent Ney, who designed together with Chris Poulissen this challenging assignment. Laurent Ney gives us a glimpse inside his head, and his sketchbooks. We follow him through an exciting process in which his knowledge of construction - historical as well as cultural, and local as well as international - blended with a clear vision of landscape and urban design. Nijmegen's city council had called for a 'city bridge', but what exactly this meant was to prove the key issue in the design process. The result is impressive: Europe's largest single-arch bridge. Using original documentation, such as the assignment description, design sketches, explorations of the surroundings, sources of inspiration, models and photographs, Laurent Ney presents a fascinating picture of a complex design process.
